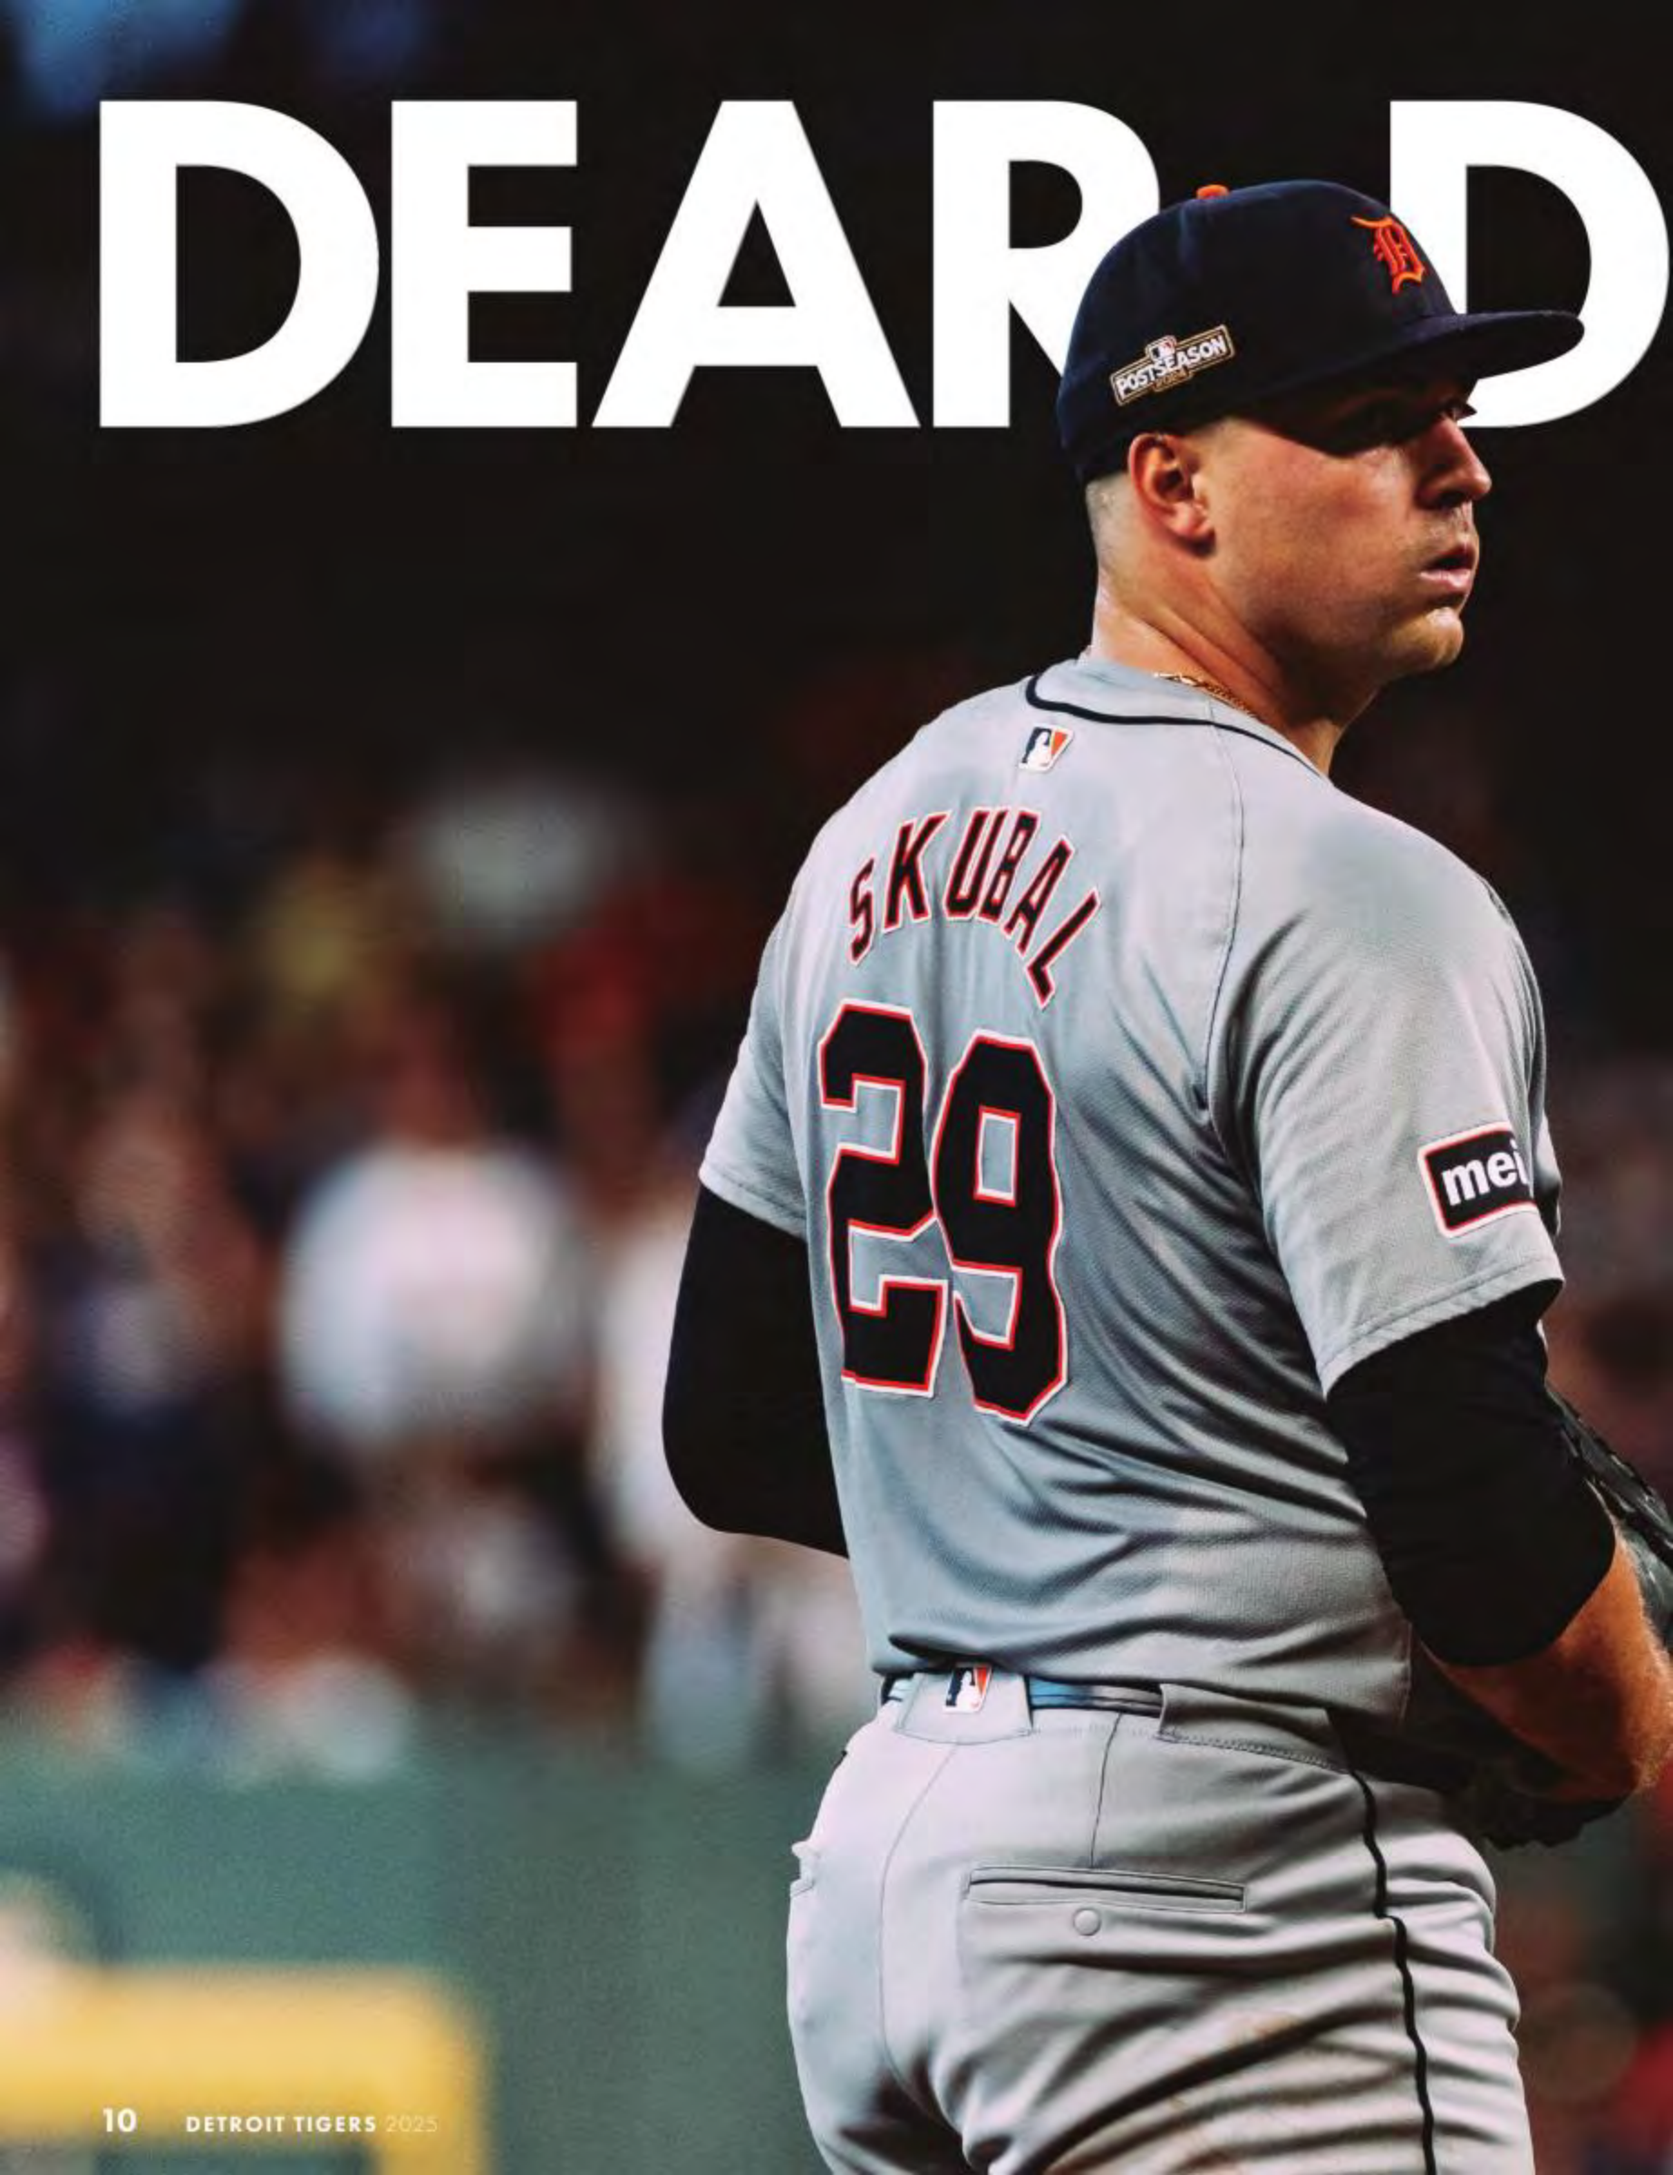
DEAR D



ETROIT

TARIK SKUBAL EMBODIES THE SPIRIT AND RESILIENCE OF DETROIT.

BY TARIK SKUBAL

Even though I'm from a small town in Arizona, we have a lot more in common than you might think.

As I've learned more about our city, it's clear that Detroit has faced its fair share of adversity, which has at times put its future in question.

For me...I only had one offer to play Divison 1 baseball, some pretty difficult injuries, and other setbacks that made my future feel uncertain.

But this city is resilient and this team is resilient. The adversity we face makes the eventual greatness even more rewarding.

From a 0.2 percent chance of making the postseason to hosting playoff games at Comerica Park.

From a ninth-round pick to unanimous Cy Young winner.

From a city in crisis to one of the greatest renaissance stories in America.

We are all overcoming the odds.

Detroit

You believe in us, and we all believe in you.

Detroit is a sports town and a slept-on city.

You don't understand this place or the people in it unless you've been here.

The grit and the grind.

The hustle and the attitude.

The culture and authenticity.

But also, a community where neighbors take care of each other and lift each other up.

I felt it more than ever at the end of last season - the way you all showed up and created an electric atmosphere made me feel so proud to be a part of this community.

It's a new era of Tigers baseball, and we're building something different.

A new standard has been set, and we're about to clock in like the blue-collar people of this city.

So, say what you want about us...about Detroit...we have unfinished business, so...let's run it back.

COVER ALL YOUR BASES

A.J. HINCH
MANAGER

On October 30, 2020, A.J. Hinch was named the 39th manager in Detroit Tigers history. Hinch has one of the most diverse range of experiences of any manager in baseball, including having success in roles as a player, manager and front office executive since breaking into professional baseball in 1997.

• Enters the 2025 campaign with a 877-793 career managerial record after stints with Arizona (2009-10), Houston (2015-19) and Detroit (2021-present)...coming into the 2025 season, Hinch leads all active Major League managers (min. 10 seasons) in career winning percentage at .525. His 307 wins with Detroit entering 2025 ranked 12th most by a manager in franchise history.

• In 2024 guided the Tigers to their first post-season appearance in 10 years on the strength of a 31-11, 42-game late-season run that elevated the Tigers from a 0.2 percent chance of qualifying for the postseason to an 86-76 overall record and Wild Card berth ... Swept the Houston Astros in their own ballpark in the Wild Card round to advance to the League Division Series, where they took the Cleveland Guardians to the fifth and decisive game before seeing their playoff run come to an end ... Was a finalist for American League Manager of the Year.

• In his first season as Tigers manager in 2021, the club overcame a slow 9-24 record to start its 2021 season, posting a 68-61 (.527) record over the rest of its schedule, which was the eighth-best winning percentage in the American League over that span...the Tigers had a 28-win improvement in the 2021 season vs. the 2019 campaign, resulting in the third-largest increase in win percentage for any MLB team over that span (.292 in 2019 to .475 in 2021)

• Did not manage during the 2020 season while serving a one-year suspension from Major League Baseball.

• Under his five-year leadership in Houston (2015-19), his most recent managerial stint prior to Detroit, the Astros reached the playoffs four times, including in his first year as manager in 2015...that playoff appearance snapped a nine-year drought for Houston, posting a 16-win improvement from the club's record the year before.

• Won the organization's first World Series championship in 2017 ... led the club to 100-plus wins in three-straight seasons (2017-19), and two American League Pennants (2017 and 2019) ... turned in a franchise-record .594 winning percentage during his time with the Astros.

• For his efforts during the 2017 season, he was named the Baseball America Manager of the Year and won the Esurance MLB Award as Major League Baseball's Best Manager...following his first season in Houston in 2015, he finished second in voting for BBWAA American League Manager of the Year Award.

• Managed the 2018 American League All-Star Team to a 10-inning, 8-6 victory at Nationals Park in Washington, D.C.

• His first managerial post was with Arizona, serving in the role for parts of the 2009 and 2010 seasons...he was 34 years-old at the time of his appointment, the youngest manager in the Major Leagues.

• Between his time as manager in Arizona and Houston, he worked in San Diego's front office from 2011-14, serving as Vice President of Scouting and Assistant General Manager...in that role he oversaw all aspects of the club's professional scouting and medical departments, while assisting with the club's roster composition, player acquisitions, talent evaluation and contract negotiations.

• Had additional front office experience with Arizona, where he worked from 2005-09 following his retirement as a player...held multiple roles including Director of Player Development until being named the club's field manager in 2009.

• Had a seven-year Major League playing career, suiting up for 350 games between Oakland (1998-2000), Kansas City (2001-02), Detroit (2003) and Philadelphia (2004)...over his career, the catcher hit .219/.280/.356 with 28 doubles, 32 home runs and 112 RBI.

• During his lone season in Detroit, Hinch played for then-manager and current Special Assistant to the President of Baseball Operations, Alan Trammell, batting .203 (15x74) with three homers and 11 RBI over 27 games.

• Was drafted three times as an amateur, eventually signing with Oakland after being selected in the third round of the 1996 MLB Draft.

• Played collegiately at Stanford University, where he established himself as one of the best catchers in the country...was a three-time All-American and All-Pac-10 team selection, and two-time Pac-10 Player of the Year, while leading the Cardinal to the College World Series in 1996 and finishing the season as a finalist for the Golden Spikes Award.

• During his time in Palo Alto, Hinch earned his Bachelor of Science in psychology and was a member of the 1996 bronze medal-winning U.S. Olympic Baseball Team.

THE 2024 SEASON WAS MEMORABLE, EXCITING AND THE ULTIMATE MOTIVATOR FOR TIGERS

BY JONATHAN MILLS

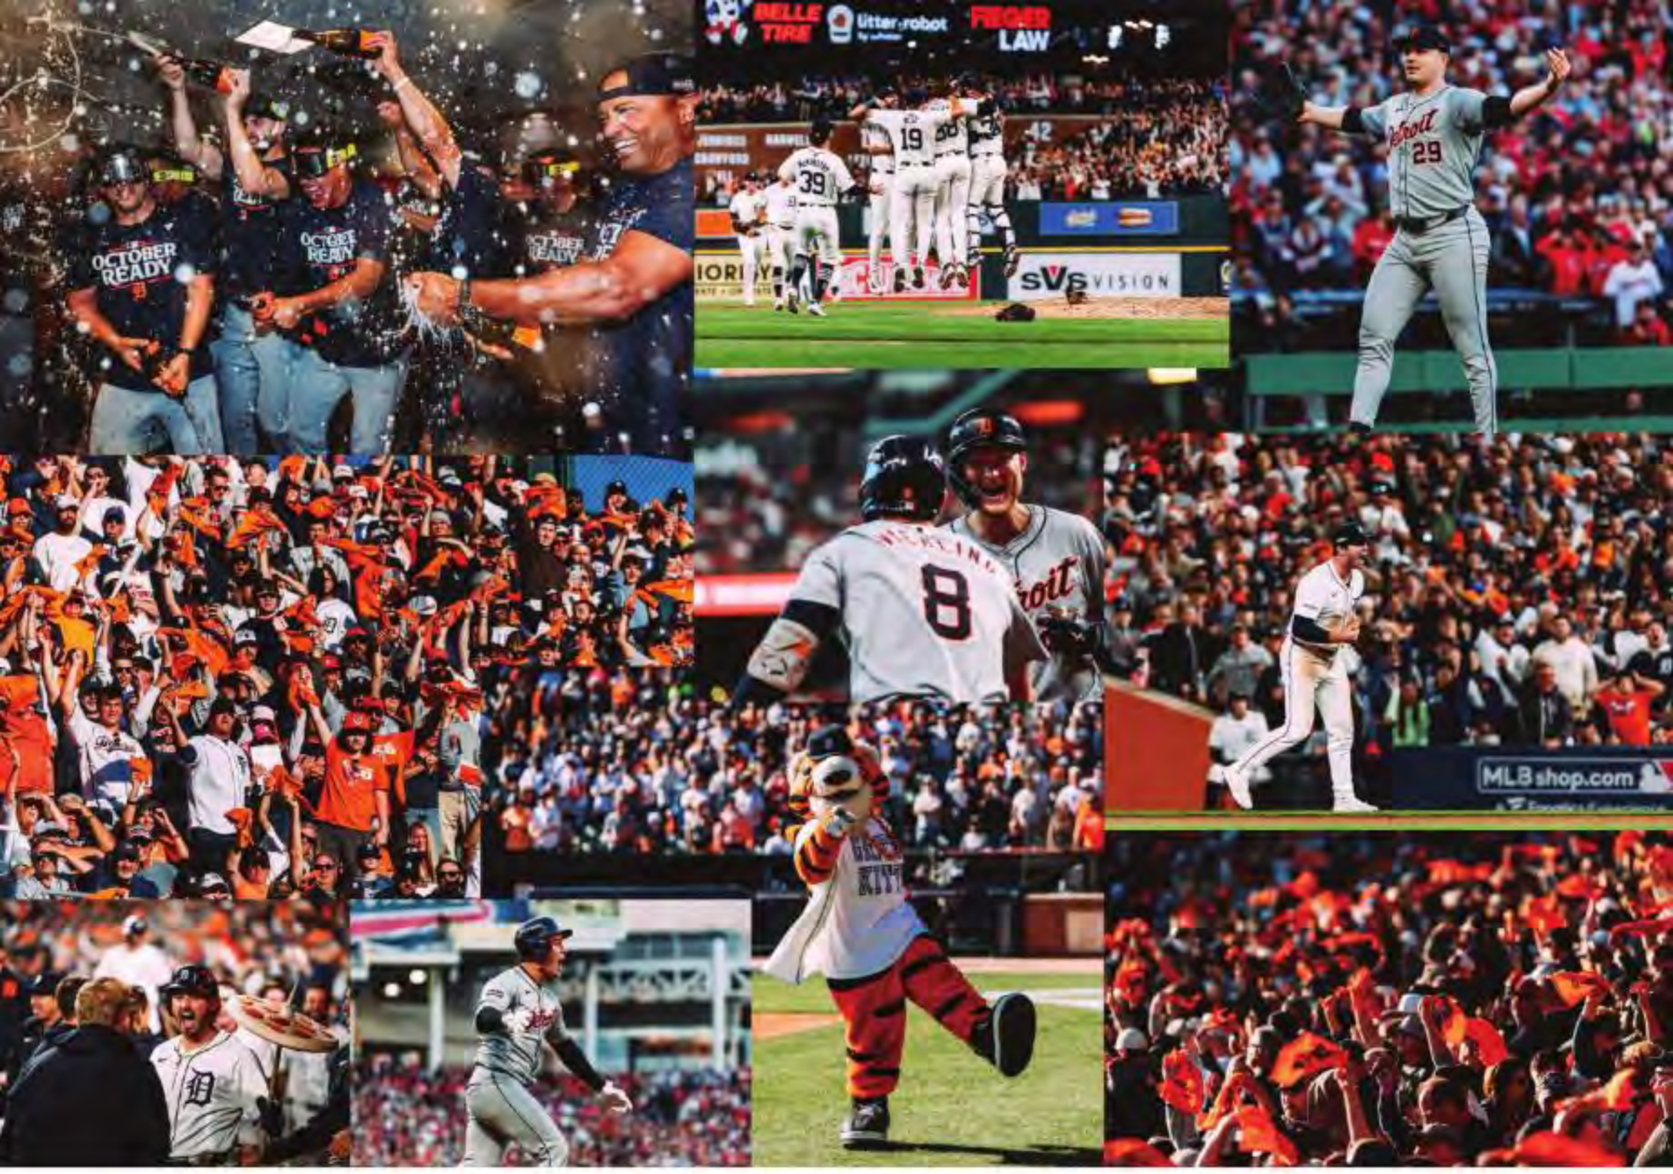
President of Baseball Operations Scott Harris revealed he was trying to balance two different emotions following the conclusion of the Tigers' 2024 campaign, which led to a remarkable late-season surge concluding in a decisive Game 5 of the American League Division Series.

"Getting your heart ripped out on one of the biggest stages in our game is both a blessing and a curse," Harris said in his end-of-season press conference on Oct. 14, 2024. "It's a blessing because it means you're playing for something. It means the last game of the season really matters. It means this is a winning group that had an incredible chance to be the last team standing at the end of the year. That's a change for this organization. It's something that all our players, coaches and staff members should be really proud of. I know I'm really proud of it, so I still find myself struggling to reconcile those two things."



"It's been a long time since there's been playoff baseball in this park and seeing Comerica Park come alive and become a competitive advantage in October again was one of the most rewarding parts of the entire season."—Scott Harris

It took roughly six months and a lot of belief, but the Tigers made incredible strides in 2024, notably clinching their first winning season since 2016 and ending a nine-year postseason drought.

"This year was special on so many levels," Hinch said, sitting alongside Harris at the press conference. "I told Scott throughout this: I had a range of emotions this season – from the optimism at the beginning of the season to the grind through the early parts... Getting off to a good start, then we hit what we felt like was rock bottom. And boy, did we bounce out of that quickly and effectively. My staff, the players, coaches and organization, we did our best to give this city a team to be proud of. I don't ever want to say we exceeded expectations, because our expectations are always going to be greater than anybody else's, but we did our best. As I told the players, we want this to be the floor. We want this feeling to resonate throughout the offseason so we can come back even more determined than ever to experience seasons like this moving forward."

And by no means was achieving an impressive list of organizational milestones a simple feat last year. There were plenty of learning experiences along the way, according to Hinch.

"These were a lot of firsts," Hinch said. "We walked into a clinching game on [Sept. 27, 2024] at Comerica Park, packed house, with the White Sox in town. In an electric environment, we clinched what was the first playoff ticket for a lot of these guys. We then walked into Houston, for the first time in a playoff series – no one expecting us to be there against a team that's been the best team in the league for a decade – and swept [the Astros] in two games and got to celebrate there. We go into the Division Series, against a familiar foe, but new experiences – get to an elimination game, come up just short for the first time. All those things are going to be used positively for our group moving forward."

Entering play on Aug. 11, 2024, that group sat in fourth place in the AL Central with a 55-63 record, and according to FanGraphs, had just a 0.2 percent chance of making the postseason. But behind a strong pitching staff and nucleus of young and ascending position players, the Tigers went 31-13 over the remainder of the regular season – the best mark in Major League Baseball over that span.

"One of the reasons why we played so well down the stretch is we were really young, really athletic, could really pitch, and we were really tough for opposing managers and teams to face," Harris said. "We created some matchup issues for other teams up and down our roster. We got a lot of feedback from different players around the organization about the brand of baseball we were playing – how aggressive we were, how fun we were, how we run the bases, how hard we play in the outfield."

The Tigers also became just the second team in MLB history to make the postseason after being at least eight games under .500 in August, joining the 1973 New York Mets.

"We saw some really exciting things with this team," Harris said. "We demonstrated, over the last 50-or-so games, that we can play with anybody. I think our track record suggests that we can. At the same time, these guys can get way better. A bunch of these young players can get a lot better. They're just starting to get comfortable at this level."

Several Tigers, including but not limited to infielders Matt Vierling and Spencer Torkelson, outfielders Riley Greene, Parker Meadows and Kerry Carpenter, catcher Jake Rogers,

"They serve as the ultimate motivator for us moving forward. That's why you take these jobs. That's why you become manager of the Tigers. That's why you become a player for the Tigers, and you push through that last rep in the middle of November, to try to prepare yourself to ultimately play for an extra month. That has to be the ultimate motivator for us, to create more scenes like that because it's really special. Those are things we've been talking about since the moment they happened."—Harris and right-hander Reese Olson, took important developmental steps forward. The future also became the present in Detroit, as eleven players – infielders Colt Keith, Jace Jung and Trey Sweeney, outfielders Justyn-Henry Malloy and Wenceel Pérez, catcher Dillon Dingler, left-handers Brant Hurter and Bryan Sammons, and right-handers Jackson Jobe, Ty Madden and Keider Montero – all made their Major League debuts in 2024.

"We saw so many debuts this year and so many players get better, and it's all because of that emphasis on developing the young talent," Harris said. "Another thing we talked about was trying to create this culture of development, and that's happening at all levels of this organization. Look no further than Parker Meadows' first half compared to his second half. He got way better. There are young players transforming in this organization that are getting a lot better and they're really helping us win."

Having benefitted from Detroit's culture of development since being selected in the ninth round of the 2018 MLB Draft out of Seattle University, left-hander Tarik Skubal's success in 2024 was a prime example of what a player can achieve while spending time honing their craft within an organization that's well-equipped to help them grow.

Skubal shined at the front of the Tigers' rotation last season, leading all AL pitchers in wins (18), earned run average (2.39) and strikeouts (228) en route to clinching the AL pitching Triple Crown and being unanimously selected as the AL Cy Young Award winner by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"The last two months of our season were a ton of fun to be part of, and the postseason was very special," Skubal said in November. "Obviously, it comes to an end and there's only one happy team at the end of the year, but it was a ton of fun to be part of. The memories and obviously the experience to help our club going forward. It was really fun and I'm glad we got to experience that as a team, especially as a young team too. It's only up from here."

In addition to Skubal, a key component of Detroit's success in 2024 was Hinch's strategy of "pitching chaos," where the calculated manager mixed and matched the available arms to keep opposing clubs guessing and create matchups in the Tigers' favor. The team's goal: Win Today's Game.

"It's our job to find strategies that suit our personnel," Harris said. "We should play differently every year because our team is going to be different every year. I think that strategy suited the pitching staff we had, especially in the second half. I like how well the players embraced their roles and performed, and how well [Hinch] executed it in the dugout. It seemed like he brought in the right pitcher every single time down the stretch."

The youth-infused Tigers defied the odds last season and now, are more determined than ever to keep building on that success in 2025.

"It's been a long time since there's been playoff baseball in this park and seeing Comerica Park come alive and become a competitive advantage in October again was one of the most rewarding parts of the entire season," Harris said. "I hope it was rewarding for our fans, and I think I can speak for every player and coach and staff member when I say that those moments, when we clinched against the White Sox in Games 3 and 4 in the ALDS, will forever be etched in our memory.

"They serve as the ultimate motivator for us moving forward. That's why you take these jobs. That's why you become manager of the Tigers. That's why you become a player for the Tigers, and you push through that last rep in the middle of November, to try to prepare yourself to ultimately play for an extra month. That has to be the ultimate motivator for us, to create more scenes like that because it's really special. Those are things we've been talking about since the moment they happened."

HEAR TIGERS

FOR TIGERS FANS, THE VOICES OF JASON BENETTI AND

BY JASON BECK

The press box for beat writers at Angel Stadium sits right next to the visiting TV broadcast booth, behind home plate. For four days during the Tigers' visit at the beginning of May, it was like a sound board.

As Tigers hitters pounded away on Angels pitching, winning three out of four games while scoring their highest run total for a four-game series since 2013, the home-run calls from Jason Benetti could be heard next door, like a neighbor to an exuberant fan. The way Detroit silenced the home crowd, some of those calls could have been heard from the box seats below.

"A.I., they say, gets better and better," Benetti wryly remarked after an RBI single from Andy Ibáñez during an eighth-inning comeback in the series opener.

"Way ... back ... and ... gone! A Dillon Dinger gives the Tigers lead," Benetti yelled on Dillon Dingler's go-ahead homer. "This team does the small details, and then they detonate you."

"Riley rifles it out of here," he was heard exclaiming on Riley Greene's go-ahead homer the next night.

"Here we go, again! The Tigers decide where the finish line is, thank you," Benetti yelled moments later, once Colt Keith followed Greene's homer with one of his own.

"Oh, man. Carpenter, liftoff," Benetti said on Kerry Carpenter's homer as part of his four-hit, five-RBI display in the series finale.

THE ROAR

DAN DICKERSON ARE SYNONYMOUS WITH MICHIGAN SUMMERS.

With all the offense, it was the luck of Dan Dickerson — whose voice finds its own top volume on big defensive plays and home runs — that his one game of the series to jump onto the television side was the Tigers' lone loss. And yet, as the Tigers tried to put together another comeback, Dickerson was skillful in managing along with Angels skipper Ron Washington, trying to explain and deduce when Washington might turn to veteran closer Kenley Jansen one night after the Tigers roughed him up.

"The first two batters that Kenley Jansen will face tonight are the two batters who started the ninth inning with home runs yesterday," Dickerson said. "Safe to say I have never seen this before. Just remember, this is a veteran pitcher who can get lefties out. This is Ron Washington saying, 'Hey, we signed you for a reason.'"

The series was a great demonstration in how the Tigers are resurgent not only on the field, but in the booth. With Benetti and Dickerson, the team arguably has its best combination of play-by-play broadcasters since the great Ernie Harwell and Hall of Famer George Kell were on other ends of the booth from the 1960s into the '90s for radio and television, respectively.

Like Harwell and Kell, Benetti and Dickerson are talented in their own right. But they do it in such different styles that they complement each other well, giving Tigers fans a wide range of insight, excitement and analysis while offering hardcore fans and casual observers alike a voice to which they can relate.

Benetti has become one of the most popular and versatile play-by-play broadcasters in the sports business, and it's not difficult to understand why. His ability to weave storytelling into the fabric of a game, to find interesting details just outside of the action as much as he can on the field, all while never losing track of the game at hand and its importance to the viewer, puts him at an elite level. He can converse in the clubhouse and have the attention of players as easily as he can take the microphone and keep viewers glued to a game. His hire two years ago was the broadcasting equivalent of the Tigers bringing in a heavy hitter to bulk up their lineup.

Dickerson, meanwhile, has become a franchise mainstay and a voice of Michigan summers on the radio, taking on the seemingly impossible challenge of succeeding a legend in Harwell and staking his own place in the Tigers' rich broadcasting history. He has called the highs and lows of the Comerica Park era and has a soundtrack to go with it, including the 2006 and 2012 World Series, Miguel Cabrera's and Justin Verlander's MVP and Triple Crown seasons, and last year's Cy Young campaign from Tarik Skubal. He has called three no-hitters and was on the microphone for Armando Galarraga's would-be perfect game.

Yet Dickerson doesn't lean on history so much as he learns from it. He weaves modern metrics into the broadcast without inundating listeners and viewers with it, picking and choosing his spots where it can offer insight into a player's performance. He takes fans into the mind of decision makers, be it the manager's in-game moves, the catcher's pitch-calling, even the front office's big picture. His decades of radio experience allows him to set the scene and describe the action in a way that is difficult to match in this era.

Styles aside, one of the common traits with Benetti and Dickerson is the art of the interview, which makes their "Have A Seat" podcast a must-listen. While they can approach a subject from their own angles, they can pick up on each other's questions and try to get the answer that becomes the highlight of an episode. with Casey Mize delves into the human side of being away from pitching for nearly two years while recovering from Tommy John and back surgeries, how finding interests outside the game allowed him to appreciate the game even more than when the diamond was his life, and how older brothers can push athletes to compete at a higher level.

"How does competitiveness come out," Benetti asks Mize, "when your typical avenue to get it out, is not there?"

"It feels like after the Tigers drafted you, that [the splitter], is it accurate to say, kind of came and went in terms of effectiveness for you in the minor leagues," Dickerson asked, eliciting a fascinating answer from Mize.

While Benetti's national duties allow TV viewers a chance to catch Dickerson off the radio dial a few times a month, the Tigers are fortunate to have the depth to fill in from within the system with a top prospect in Greg Gania, the voice of the Double-A Erie SeaWolves, whose calls have garnered their own following. Put it all together, and the Tigers have the broadcasting talent to bring the nuances of the game to the fans while still appreciating what Tigers baseball means in the fabric of a Michigan summer.

TINY TIGERS

Sponsored by the Detroit Tigers Foundation, 'Tiny Tigers' is a t-ball and junior baseball program for children ages 4-8, the youngest members of Play Baseball Detroit. Since its inception in 2008, more than 6,500 children have enrolled in Tiny Tigers. The program introduces children to the skills and drills for t-ball and coach pitch. This summer, Tiny Tigers is excited to help share the game of baseball with the next generation of fans and perhaps the future of the Detroit Tigers.

Think that's scary?
Sharks can be terrifying.
But what's really scary,
and even deadly,
is distracted driving.
